

Dr. Rao Ping-fan is Professor and Director of Institute of Biotechnology, Fuzhou University, China. He earned his Bachelor of Food Technology from Fuzhou University in China in 1982, and Ph.D. in Biochemistry from Institute for Protein Research of Osaka University in Japan in 1989. He started teaching at Fuzhou University in 1989.

Dr. Rao's research activities focus on identification and characterization of bioactive proteins and peptides, gene expression and scale production of industrial enzymes, protein derivatives as the active ingredient of traditional Chinese medicine, industrialization of traditional Chinese foods.

Dr. Rao is vice-president of Chinese Institute of Food Science and Technology. He was elected as a fellow of International Academy of Food Science and Technology in 2008 and a governing council member (2006-2010) and president-elect (2012-2014) of International Union of Food Science and Technology.

Dr. Rao is Distinguished Visiting Professor of the University of Ulster, UK, and co-supervisor of PhD course of the University of Edinburgh, UK. He is also science and technology advisor to Fuzhou municipal governments.